

Evidence of English Proficiency

Evidence of English proficiency demonstrates that an applicant has the language skills required to study, work, or communicate effectively in an English-speaking environment.

Common forms of evidence include:

- IELTS Academic
- TOEFL iBT
- PTE Academic
- Cambridge English Qualifications
- Completion of previous education where English was the primary language of instruction (subject to institution requirements)

Institutions may require minimum scores depending on the course or program. Applicants should always check the specific English language requirements published by the institution before submitting their application.

This document is a general informational summary and is not an official proof of English proficiency.